SCHOOL DAYS—FRIDAY.

She stood trim and beautiful before the window which was wide open. A new broom was in her hand, a bonnet of pink gingham covered her pretty, brown hair, and while waiting for the dust to settle, and the children to arrive, she had time to give the thought, which was uppermost in her heart, a most earnest heading. The most of momentous questions confronted her. Should she answer in the affirmative or respond in the negative? The way out of a dull routine of life was opening very beautifully. She could have everything that wealth could buy; a home with every comfort; her father and mother made independent for life, and there would ever more be known the inconvenience of poverty, the "ifs" and "ands" of outrageous fortune. It all depended upon herself—the burden bearer in every phase of practical consideration, or effort, and now brought face to face with the no longer unknown quantity she breathed a prayer for courage, and took upon her heart sweet confidence. The words of Proctor flashed through her consciousness: "Make no man your idol. For the best man must have faults, and his faults will usually become your's in addition to your own. This is true in art as it is in morals." Just here the children came trooping in and she very quickly brushed away dust from the desks, and rang the bell, setting aside all possible disturbances of mental disengagement until she was at liberty to talk the matter over which the author of the disturbance. In the meantime, something might intervene to cross the winter of her discontent.

There were three new pupils on this last day of the week. They had never been in school before. Had no hooks, and one of them, a girl, had such a pronounced case of glasses that the rest of the school were soon contaminated. But it soon wore away in the sympathy brought about by the pathetic crying of the other child for home and mamma.

Miss Green was truly thankful that she had had normal training, and had studied psychic tendencies. Both of these helped were of great assistance in ascertaining the cause for hysterics, and how to soothe nerves, which were ragged, jagged, and beyond control of the possessor, running away with even the natural common sense of the poor unfortunate.

"Come to recitation, children. Those of you who are not in the third reader may listen to me while I explain the story lesson."

It was a chalk-black bird story as the children called it—but other birds and things were brought out in colors most entertaining. The new children sat entranced, and when the new house was finished, the mother and father bird begun home-keeping, while the reading went on—there settled down within the circle a sensation of condition, calm, restful and quiet, enabling the teacher to take the reins of government in her own hands and conduct subsequent recitations with judicious exactness, justice and equity.

She was like a general on the field of battle. Each and every child represented the soldier ready for order or engagement, and the lessons were learned with surprising readiness. When the hour came for writing, one could have heard a pin drop, so generally assimilated was the power of control, generated, actualized, in the definite self-reliance of a born leader made to teach children.

Instruction in the art of chirography means no small amount of patience. The common run of copy books are too classified, or too simple for much gratification either to the person teaching, or being taught, and in a neighborhood where the pedagogue had to buy out of her slender salary, brooms, dippers, water bucket, stove pipe, chalk, and even the fuel or often time go without fire—it was simply a question of economy to set copy, and arrange the formula of height in the letters, position of the scribe, and all the hundred and one exigencies of the situation. One boy would insist upon holding his head to one side, thrusting his tongue out of his mouth, and stabbing the pen point into the paper nine times out of every tenth effort.

The teacher strapped him into harness made for the purpose, and put glasses on him. John Isham wrote a more masterful hand than any boy who was graduated under the tutelage of Miss Green, and he told me not long ago "that the home-made harness helped out lots."

Recess was always pleasant on a Friday. A picnic feeling pervaded the air. The baskets and buckets were emptied and their contents set upon a long bench covered with a white cloth, and every one enjoyed the pleasure of "dining out," while eating each other's food, prepared expressly for this occasion. Singing, too, came in for a part of the service, and the organization of social, as well as table etiquette, was permanent in its every effect, never to be forgotten in subsequent life, and a memory in the heart as lasting as are the scenes of beauty photographed with the camera of love.

Arithmetic came up after noon recess—a review. It was essentially practical. The measuring of floors and windows. The height and breadth of the children, the length of dresses and the expenditure of funds in an every day purchase of commodities required for food and clothing. After arithmetic, drawing lessons (on the board) in geography, were made interesting, and the regular spelling lessons, where in every child had a share of words, with inducements for going head.

There was no afternoon recess. When the spelling lesson was over, the weekly roll call was made. Merits or demerits accredited upon a register, and when the desks were put in order, the banners, hats and baskets, in the hands of their owners. Books and papers in satchels. All heads were lowered while a whispered benediction was given and the children fled out into the evening shadows, light-hearted and happy, but with a softened touch of something strangely calm. The week of labor was ended. Had one thing happened to impress its identity upon the soul? Had the teacher acted upon the intellectual entity, only; or was the threefold-ord stronger and more enduring than before?

Miss Green arranged her own desk, and then, after mature deliberation, lay her head upon the table and wept as if her heart must break. The storm and tempest blew over, blue sky was seen in the gloaming, a great peace possessed her being, and in the spirit of a little child she, too, passed out into the evening, content to go forward always in the discharge of duty.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE FOR EDUCATION IN THE SOUTH.

We desire to call the special attention of all interested in popular education, to the above meeting, which will be held at Lexington Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, May 2, 3 and 4.

Who are invited to attend the sessions of this Conference? In the language of its President, the Hon. Robert C. Ogden, of New York City, "all who sympathize with its general aims are cordially welcome."

What is the general aim of the Conference? "Its purpose is to spread the gospel of education for all the people." Its aims, therefore, being popular rather than professional.

The topics presented and discussed have a common interest for educators of every rank, as well as for all intelligent and patriotic citizens.

Seth Low, Dr. Lyman Abbott, Dr. Albert Shaw, and others. It is thought that some several governors and ex-governors of the South will be present. The presidents of all the colleges and universities of the South, State superintendents, professors, teachers, citizens by the hundreds and thousands.

The sessions will be held at the Auditorium, in Woodland Park.

On Wednesday the members will be treated to an old-fashioned Kentucky burgo and barbecue. This is the opportunity of a lifetime for attending a great meeting. Let Frankfort and Franklin county teachers and citizens show their appreciation of those worthy visitors by greeting them in large numbers.

There's grave danger from the plague of Congis and Colds that are so prevalent, unless you take Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Mrs. Geo. It prevents Pneumonia, cures LaGrippe, gives wonderful relief in Asthma and Hay Fever, and makes weak lungs strong enough to ward off Consumption, Coughs and Colds, Sore and Sore Throat. Guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottle free."

Another, and the most important reason is that they always buy them from us a little cheaper than they are usually sold.

APPALLING DISASTER.

San Francisco Business Center Destroyed by Earthquakes.

Fire Adds Horror to Situation.

News was received in this city, about noon on Wednesday, of one of the most awful and appalling disasters that has ever happened in this country, which occurred at 5:15 o'clock a. m., of that day.

The first shock of a series of earthquakes came at that hour and lasted the unusual time of three minutes. It was followed at varying intervals by other shocks of a much shorter and less disastrous character, throughout the day and night.

Strong and substantial brick and frame buildings shook, crumbled and crashed to the ground, carrying everything with them, both human and inanimate. The worst damage was done in the business and manufacturing centers, and the residence portion of the city escaped with comparatively little damage.

To add to the horror, almost simultaneously, fires broke out in hundreds of different localities and burned furiously, without any means of extinguishing them, on account of the water mains being broken and burst by the earthquakes.

Vast fissures opened in the ground at various places, and a railroad was swallowed up for more than three miles of its length. The street car tracks were twisted and turned about and made unfit for use, even if the streets had been so that the cars could have been run.

Many fine buildings, which had escaped material damage by the earthquakes, were consumed by the awful flames that followed.

As was believed would be the case, the modern buildings, which had steel framework, were enabled to successfully withstand the throes of the trembling earth, while the old-fashioned brick and frame structures crumbled and collapsed like cardboard houses.

The loss of life was terrific, and as yet is not definitely known, although hundreds of bodies have been recovered from the ruins. In fact, it may never be known just how many persons lost their lives.

The property loss is simply appalling and may reach $200,000,000. Taken altogether, it was one of the most awful calamities that has ever occurred in this country.

Let us learn from it the inevitable lessons that all things earthly must soon pass away and only heaven is sure.

Later—By later dispatches it is learned that a large proportion of the residence part of the city has been burned, and the end is not yet in sight.

Dr. Miles' Nerve Cure Me.

When the nervous system has been shattered by the use of deadly drugs there is nothing to equal Dr. Miles' Nerve in restoring it to health and normal activity.

"I feel so grateful for what Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve has done for me that I must tell it for that part of humanity that suffers as I have. During the three years I suffered from nervous prostration I found no relief except when doctors gave morphine. To get rid of suffering I took morphine myself as it was the only thing that would give ease, and now you, who point with scorn at morphine using, how could you, when in such agony, knowing it about the only thing that would give relief, resist it? I knew it was a terrible habit and I knew of its deadly grasp, but I never fully realized its significance until I had used it a number of months. Oh, the misery of being addicted to such a habit. I resolved then and there to quit it and resolved I would never be a slave to any such demon. About this time I happened to notice Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve advertised and ordered a bottle. After using five bottles I can truthfully say I am cured of using morphine. Now, however much persons may doubt it, God is my witness I am cured. This testimonial is unsolicited but I feel it my duty to give it for the benefit of the suffering."—MATTIE PHILLIPS, Prescott, Ark.

CLIMATIC CURES.

The influence of climatic conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stayed by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer climate, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those that use German Syrup. Trial bottle 50c., regular size, 75c. At all druggists. 1 vr.

APPOINTED CIRCUIT JUDGE.

NARROW ESCAPE OF TWO FAMILIES.

On Sunday last, Mrs. C. A. Nelson made a freezer full of ice cream, from which her family (with the exception of her son Will) partook freely, on Sunday last.

Mrs. Nelson sent a dish of the ice cream to the family of Mr. Robert L. Roberts, in the afternoon, and all the family except Mr. Roberts partook freely of the delightful ice.

About night, after the Nelson family who had partaken of the cream, became deathly sick and Miss Claranet dangerously so.

Mrs. Roberts went to assist in nursing her neighbors, and just before bedtime she was called home by Mr. Roberts, all three of whose children had become very sick by this time. Shortly afterwards Mr. Roberts herself was stricken down. After a tough siege, lasting until about 2 o'clock Monday morning, the sick of both families were relieved.

It is supposed that ptomaine poison had formed in the freezer of cream and this produced the sickness.

It was a narrow escape for all concerned.

UNUSUAL SIGHT.

When returning from Versailles, on Sunday night, the writer noticed, when just two miles from that place, a bright light shining on the clouds which hung low over in the direction of this city. At times the light would flare up just as though flames were breaking out afresh in the city.

Driving rapidly in this direction, although the night was dark and raining, the light increased until the pike was rendered light to such an extent as to render driving easy.

We were almost sure there was a big fire raging here until we arrived in sight of the electric lights of the city, when it was seen that the glare was caused by those lights.

We had frequently seen those lights from as far as seven miles, or a little over, but never as much as twelve miles, the distance we were then from home.

We were greatly relieved to find there was no fire.

OUR DRUGGIST TELLS US.

We learn to-day that our local druggists have made special arrangements which carries with it an agreement to keep in stock constantly a full line of special prescriptions created at the Laboratories of Dr. Shoop.

A novel, yet thoroughly practical and newly-created article has just been issued from the Laboratories in question, called Lax-ets and is included as a part of the arrangement made to-day by the druggist in question. We refer to a prescription put up in candy tablet form, for the relief of constipation, sour stomach, bad breath, sallow complexion, biliousness, headache, etc., etc. The novelty of Lax-ets arises from two or three sources. It has not even the suspicion, so far as taste is concerned, that the article is a medicine. It is candy in taste, and in appearance. Again, Lax-ets are put up in beautifully lithographed metal boxes, and retail for the remarkably low price of 5 cents per box.

On the box is printed the ingredients, consisting of Cascara Sagrada, Egyptian Senna, Solid Extract of French Prunes, Slippery Elm Bark, and other highly meritorious ingredients for the conditions mentioned above.

A candy Cold Cure put up in the same style also sells at 5 cents per box and is called "Dr. Shoop's Preventives."

Patrons, we believe, will be glad to learn of the new arrangement, and particularly of the new remedies, which certainly seem worthy of a trial purchase involving only the cost of a nickel.

PRESBYTERY ORDERS DISSOLUTION.

Rev. Dr. Henry Dosker, of the Louisville Theological Seminary of the Presbyterian Church, will supply the pulpit for the month of May.

FRANKFORT FEELS PROUD.

We take the following clipping, from the Danville Advocate, of April 18. Mr. Joseph Bailey Brown, one of the winners of the gold medal for oratory, is a nephew of Mrs. W. F. Barret, Mrs. W. T. Scott and Mrs. Joseph Bailey (for whose husband he was named). He is a brilliant and capable young man, and is a graduate of the Frankfort High School. His father, Mr. Knox Brown, and his mother, were both born and reared in this city, though now living in Owen county.

"CENTRAL WINS.

"The Danville College was first in the race for debating honors last Friday evening in the inter-collegiate contest with State College at Lexington. The contest was well attended and the Central representatives warmed to their subjects.

"This is the first contest in the inter-collegiate association this season. The debate was on the question, 'Resolved, That the Inter-State Transportation Rates should be regulated by the National Legislature,' Central taking the affirmative and State the negative. The judges were: Judge Watts Parker, Matt Walton, President W. G. Frost, of Berea; President J. L. Ober, of Kentucky Wesleyan, and Judge James P. Tarvin, of Covington. The vote was very close, Central winning three to two. The contestants were: Joseph Bailey Brown (son of Mr. Knox Brown), C. Cheek and G. V. Triplett, for Central University, and A. M. Kirby, W. S. Hamilton and W. J. Baxter, for state College."—Danville Advocate.

A Wonderful Record.

As made up by improved and exact processes Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the womanly functions, correcting displacements, as prolapsus, anteversion and retroversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. It cures the backache, neuralgic headache, the dragging-down distress in the pelvic region, the pain and tenderness over lower abdominal region, dries up the pelvic catarrhal drain, so disagreeable and weakening, and overcomes every form of weakness incident to the organs distinctly feminine.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, the makers of which are not afraid to print their formula on the bottle wrapper, thus taking their patrons into their full confidence. It is the only medicine for women, every ingredient of which has the strongest possible endorsement of the most eminent medical practitioners and writers of our day, recommending it for the diseases for which "Favorite Prescription" is used. It is the only put-up medicine for women, sold through druggists, which does not contain a large percentage of alcohol, so harmful in the long run, especially to delicate women. It has more genuine cures to its credit than all other medicines for women combined, having saved thousands of sufferers from the operating table and the surgeon's knife. It has restored delicate, weak women to strong and vigorous health and vitality, making motherhood possible, where there was barrenness before, thereby brightening and making happy many thousands of homes by the advent of little ones to strengthen the marital bonds and add sunshine where gloom and despondency had reigned before.

Write to Dr. R. V. Pierce. He will send you good, fatherly, professional advice in a plain, sealed envelope, absolutely free. Address him at Buffalo, N. Y.

BURGLARY AT FARMDALE.

A white man entered the home of Mr. Wallace Estill (who owns the old Tom Farmer place, opposite the Stewart Home), six miles from the city, on Friday night, but was run off without obtaining any booty.

The burglar was very cool about it and carried a lamp part of the time.
Mr. Estill then fired two shots, but does not think he hit the man. He obtained entrance through a back door that Mr. Estill had left unfastened for his son to come in.

Chapter II.

Mother-love, the only untiring and invincible motor in the mind world, untiring, because it ends only with the mother's life; invincible, because though scarred on every point of its surface and shocked, or even crushed to its center by indifference, neglect, or even open abuse—mother-love serves the offender with gentle, glowing, tender enthusiasm until "Our Father" says it is "enough, come up higher."

Such mother-love was patiently watching and nursing the darling daughter, Una, back to an unexplored and non-constructive future. Thus attended we leave Una and go back to Mrs. Dare's, where David is hastily preparing to board the railroad train, which is now nearly due. In order to reach the station in time, David calls to a traveler, who is driving along the public road and asks to be taken to the station. He is scarcely seated in the vehicle, when he discovers that the man, with whom he is riding, is not guiding the horse, and from the strange glare in his eyes, David infers that he is in the power of a maniac. Their vehicle is very near the railroad track, the train has whistled, and though it cannot be seen, because of a curve in the road, it is so near that in another instant it will be upon them unless the horse is turned aside. David tries to take the reins, but with an unceremonious jerk the madman leaps to the track with the reins in his hands, and, strange to say, when the engine struck the vehicle, its owner and the horse being instantly killed, David was thrown into a ditch beside the track, whence he was conveyed in an unconscious condition back to his mother's home.

Upon examination it was found, by the physician, Dr. Palliate, that he had sustained injuries which would necessitate his remaining quiet for days, perhaps weeks. When David awoke to consciousness, looking about the room and seeing his mother, he said, "Mother, I have had a fearful dream. What time is it? I would not have that train leave me for the world." At the same time he attempted to rise.

Alas 'twas not a dream, but a terrible reality, which he soon recognized, and in his helplessness asked: "Mother, will not Una come to me? Of course you wrote to her of my accident."

"Yes, David, I wrote to her and addressed the letter to Elmville, where her parents reside. David, you remember you did not tell me where you left Una, and you turned the letter telling us of her illness, so I wrote to Mr. Heart's business manager, Mr. Tellnot, and asked that my letter be forwarded to Mr. Heart. You know, too, that there are often delays in our mail." His mother dared not to tell him, in his weak condition, how many days he had been insensible.

"Then I know Una will come as soon as she learns of my collision with that—engine," said David, and to his mother's much-needed relief he again fell asleep. She dreaded the time when she should be obliged to tell David that her letter to Mr. Tellnot had been returned to her with a note, saying he had received instructions from Mr. Heart that no letters should be sent to him except those of a purely business character, and that no individual, under any circumstances, should be given his address, an assumed one, known only to Mr. Tellnot. Who can appreciate David's mother's situation? Was there not a two-edged knife destroying her vitality?

Reader, if you have a living mother, beware how you handle the knives that are in your keeping.

Hoping David will sleep until much improved, we leave him and witness Mr. and Mrs. Heart's agony when they found Una insensible, deserted by her husband, and nothing to explain a single circumstance.

"They may not weep—they can not sigh,

A weight is pressing on their brow;

A breath breathes on them witheringly.

Their tears are dry, their sighs suppressed!"

From intimations in the foregoing, the reader will infer that Mr. Heart, Una's father, acts promptly. Receiving no reply to his letter, which he had rightly supposed would reach David Dare at his mother's, he at once decided to leave Altona as soon as Una should be able to travel, and if possible cut off all communication with his family's former associates for the remainder of the time allotted for their tour.

Una's father, having received no reply to his letter, deemed David Dare's conduct an unpardonable insult to himself, as well as an outrage not to be forgiven by his daughter, and at once decided to leave Altona as soon as Una should be able to travel.

"We will not subject our daughter to the ton for meretricious scandal-mongers, and we will combine our summer drive through the country, as far as possible from all telegraph and mail facilities. I believe Una's good sense, with the constant change of scene, will restore her health and fortify her against any efforts made by David Dare, should he attempt to offer any explanation for his inhuman conduct."

It will be remembered by our readers, that the last conversation between David and Una occurred after the rising bell had rung, and before breakfast. When they did not appear, as usual, at the breakfast table, a servant was sent to their room to ask if they would have breakfast in their room. No response being made to his knock, after repeated knocking, the servant returned to the dining hall and said he "could not make any one here."

As if by intuition of impending evil, Mr. and Mrs. Heart at once arose and hastened to the bridal chamber, where they found Una as aforesaid.

There being no one in the house who could give any account of David Dare, and there being no indication of personal violence, the physician gave his opinion as aforesaid. Thinking David had gone out into the village, a messenger was sent to find him, if possible, and tell him of Una's illness.

The messenger returned saying, "A person who was well acquainted with Mr. David Dare had driven up to the 'livery stable,' while he was asking if Mr. Dare had been at the stable, and said he had passed Mr. David Dare at least five miles from the village, in a road cart with another gentleman. They were driving a very fast horse, and doubtless he was so far by this time that the quickest way to overtake him, would be to wait until the railroad train came along and send message by that."

Acting upon this information, Mr. Heart had the letter, before referred to, sent to Walnut Hill, which David received so promptly, but, as we know, was not answered, and Mr. Heart accordingly instructed his agent, Mr. Tellnot, as aforesaid.

Days of suspense and parental solicitude are at last rewarded, the crisis in her condition being safely passed. Reader, shall I tell you what Una is like?

"There is a ray of love in her bright eye,

That with its magic wins the soul it warms,

There is a smile of beauty on her lips,

That soft beguiling beckons to a banquet,

But there's a mild serenity of virtue

That in this sunny paradise prevails,

Hallows each charm, and awes profane approach."

Una's parents avoided reference to the cause of her illness until she voluntarily gave them as nearly as she could remember the conversation which she and David had, just before he left her; adding that she knew David only meant to tease her a little by what he said as he left the room—and knowing that David's mother lived near Walnut Hill, Una said he was "no doubt waiting there for them."

"My dear daughter," said her father, "I trust your version of David's conduct is true, and if true, he was too unwell, to say the least of him, not to be reproved, and I think the mildest and most effectual way to administer what he deserves, is to continue our tour in another direction, not letting David know our whereabouts—and by the time he finds us he will 'see himself as others see him.'"

"Father, whatever you say shall be my law while I am with you; I am ready to leave this place at any time. The view from my window saddens me. Whenever I look out there I seem to see David get into that road cart and ride so quickly out of sight."

Accordingly, our little party of three, Mr. and Mrs. Heart and Una Dare set out in a beautiful new surrey which Mr. Heart had ordered from Messrs. Publish, Advertiser & Co., Carriage Manufacturers, who thought it would be a nice little advertisement for them to have mentioned in the personal column of the city paper, "that the wealthy Mr. Heart, of Elmville, had ordered one of their handsome, new-style surreys, to be sent to Altona, whence he proposed to drive himself and family through the 'blue-grass' region of Kentucky. Mr. Heart's surrey is now on exhibition in our factory, but will be delivered to him next Tuesday. Parties wanting a surrey would do well to see this before it is shipped."

No peace for the kidney sufferer—Pain and distress from morn to night. Get up with a lame back. Twinges of backache bother you all day. Dull aching breaks your rest at night.

Urinary disorders add to your misery. Get at the cause—cure the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills will work the cure. They're for the kidneys only—Have made great cures in Frankfurt.

W. T. Frazier, proprietor of Frazier's Candy Kitchen, 43 St. Clair St., residing No. 5 Second Street, says: "The efficiency of Doan's Kidney Pills was amply proven in my case. I suffered from backache a great deal, often so severely that I could not turn in bed. In the morning when I got up, it was a common thing to feel lame and sore in the back. Being on my feet so much of the time in my store no doubt tended to aggravate the trouble. And sure to find some relief and a permanent cure if possible, when I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, and saw them so highly recommended by people living near by, I went to J. W. Gayle's drug store and got a box. It was a glad surprise to me to find that after taking them for a day or two they were removing the pain. I continued the treatment and by the time I had finished the box, the trouble was entirely removed. Up-to-date, I have felt no recurrence. It is a pleasure to me to endorse this preparation."
